It's almost impossible to find an informative website when it comes to learning how to avoid writer's block, but there are some resources out there that will help you out! There are blogs with helpful tips, websites that give away writing prompts for inspiration, and even TV shows that can help. Just because you are a writer, does not mean you are alone in needing help. We are all in this together! Tips to avoid writer's block 1. Take up your time with writing, don't just set it aside. Ditch the excuses and let your creativity flow through you! 2. Schedule time to write down your ideas or just stare at the wall or ceiling. You'll be surprised what comes to mind! Don't force it, though! When you try too hard you can lose inspiration to keep writing! But don't be afraid to take notes if your day-to-day life becomes overwhelming... 3. When you start to feel the urge to write, do it! Even if you don't know where to begin, grab a pen and paper and start writing about your day. 4. The more you write the better your writing will get! 5. Watch TV shows, documentaries and movies that inspire you or put you in one of those "movie-inspired" moods that boost creativity. If nothing else gets your ideas flowing, then try writing about the movie itself: what was good and bad, what were the themes and message? What was said and how was it said? What would happen if...? 6. If you don't know where to begin, try writing a list of things that inspire you. Try writing a fictional or non-fiction book about your life, if you have one. If not, write an autobiography using a celebrity as your subject instead! There are so many different options when it comes to writing books, so start looking for ideas and inspiration online! 7. Take a break! Take a walk outside or curl up with a good book instead of stressing out about writer's block! If you're not sure what to read, try picking up the first book from an author that sparked your interest. Most popular books have been made into movies as well as television shows, so find some inspiration from those as well! 8. If you still can't get over the block and feel like you're never going to, then find someone else to write for you! There are plenty of people on Fiverr that will write your book or article for a small fee. Or, if you're feeling ambitious (and brave), try writing it yourself! 9. Lastly, try different things to get your creative juices flowing again. Just because writer's block is a "block" doesn't mean it has to be boring and dull; make it an opportunity for change and opportunity. Most people will agree: Writer's block is serious business! But no worries: here are some tips and advice from fellow writers who have been there before! 1.
