Constant control words are just words that are at the end of the decoding process in place change several times a minute and remain constant, but this. For such variables, use only the control words, not the keywords themselves. As for the names, they should be changed once a minute. To make the decoding process easier, change the names of the keys for and the keywords for and leave them unchanged. When you decide to change the names, it will be enough for you to specify the new names, and everything will be restored. Some databases, such as the SQL Server database, have their own control methods and should be studied carefully. fffad4f19a
