As a material of film capacitor which is superior in its physical properties, e.g. heat resistance and chemical resistance, there has been a demand for a plastic material, especially for a resin material for film capacitor. It has therefore been proposed to use polyethylene (Japanese Patent Publication No. 15684/1968), polybutadiene (Japanese Patent Publication No. 8068/1973), polypropylene (Japanese Patent Publication No. 8718/1974), polyethylene terephthalate (Japanese Patent Publication No. 8719/1974), polystyrene (Japanese Patent Publication No. 5365/1975), styrene copolymer (Japanese Patent Publication No. 59705/1975) or the like as a material of film capacitor. However, a plastic material for film capacitor, especially a plastic material for film capacitor which can be suitable for the formation of capacitor elements and the like with a conductor layer and a dielectric layer applied to the capacitor elements, still has not yet been developed. It has also been proposed to use a low crystalline polyester as a resin for film capacitor in order to improve the flexibility
