Tomtom 7.910 Per Wince 6.0 E Autoradio 13

I've read a few other posts here about this problem with other people, but none of them seem to solve my problem. I've been using Windows 10 since April last year and it's the first time that I've encountered this issue. The problem came after a couple of updates, but I've no idea which updates exactly caused this. The specs are Intel Core i3-5010U Processor 3.50 GHz / 3.70 GHz 6 GB RAM NVIDIA GeForce GT 630M 1GB Windows 10 Home 64-bit Intel Core i3-5010U Processor 3.50 GHz / 3.70 GHz 6 GB RAM NVIDIA GeForce GT 630M 1GB Windows 10 Home 64-bit Could this be the problem? A: Update: May 2020 Windows 10 Anniversary Update v1903 The x64-update from the 2019 security bulletin is fixed in Windows Update. Windows 10 Insider Preview v2004 (Build 19043.922) has the same fixed. Cause: A memory buffer overflow was addressed in the Microsoft Malicious Software Removal Tool (MSRT) used by the Windows defender antimalware engine. Microsoft Knowledge Base Article 2027478 describes how to identify the types of attacks affected. Workaround: If you are running Windows 10, this update is the recommended fix. Windows 10, version 1903, is no longer supported by Windows Update. See Microsoft's Fix it first: Microsoft will not provide updates to Windows 10 1903. If you need Windows 10 1903 security updates, please download the latest version of the Windows 10 May 2019

Update instead. If you are running Windows 10, you can use Windows Update to find Windows 10, version 1903 updates. In older Windows releases, you may be able to continue using Windows Update, but this may mean you won't get security updates for the Windows operating system. If you are already running Windows 10, version 1903, it is strongly recommended that you do not use Windows Update to update your Windows system. Instead, download a supported version of Windows 10, version 1909 or later. Microsoft doesn't recommend this, but if you must use Windows Update, you can use the Windows 10 March Update to continue using Windows 10, version 1903. Windows Update will provide Windows 10, version 1903, security updates for you until July 2023. How to manually install the March Update, version 1903 Click on
