SudokuSolver Sudoku Solver (also known as sudokusolver.com) is a Sudoku game that is fun and addictive. The player is presented with a grid of cells, and must make the numbers 1 through 9 appear in the cells so that every row, column and 3x3 box contains the numbers 1 through 9 exactly once. The goal of the game is to see how many puzzles the player can solve before a specified number of minutes are up. There is no time limit for the player to complete the puzzle. When a puzzle is completed, the player is presented with a short recap of how they did. Various hints are also provided, and the player may toggle the display of these to help them see possible moves that they may have missed. The player may choose to continue, or quit the game at any time. SudokuSolver Description: Twitter Social Network... well, Twitter. As Twitter adds more features, such as more trending topics, more controls for users, etc., it seems to me that the site is starting to get a little stale. Plus, the site needs more users to keep it alive. Here's a suggestion for you. Why not add a Twitter/Facebook tab that displays a stream of tweets/tweets from both networks, followed by news (kinda like Slashdot, or Digg?). Maybe I'm over-exaggerating, but I think that people are starting to get tired of Twitter, and that they might like to see more news about other things that are happening right now. You could even save on bandwidth and storage space by having the Twitter tab fetch all of the tweets from the various feeds and posts that it could find. There are already many Twitter Apps for Android, and of course there are Twitter Clients for a host of other OSs, so it shouldn't be difficult to include a widget in one of them. You could create a special 'Twitter/Facebook Highlights' feed on your RSS reader or something, and if there are any interesting news items on Twitter or Facebook, you could have them post it on there. There's already a Facebook Social Network, so I'm not sure that they're going to allow you to submit an app there, but I'll let you know if I find out anything. If the features are implemented, it could be a good addition to the site. Maybe you can turn this idea into a serious concept and expand it into a
