The Year of the Ox is one of the most auspicious of the traditional Chinese zodiacs, and has been a part of Chinese culture since the Zhou Dynasty (1100-256 BC). It is the fourth animal of the 12-year cycle and the first of the three animals which has been used as a symbol to the Chinese civilization and is viewed as a significant and lucky animal in traditional Chinese culture. The Chinese also believe that it's the first animal of the 12-year cycle and the first of the three animals which has been used as a symbol to the Chinese civilization. During the Chinese Spring Festival, the Year of the Ox is a time to eat good food, drink lots of tea and consume small animals as good luck. It's also the time to wear red clothes and the Chinese believe that wearing red clothes can bring luck and good fortune to you. The Year of the Ox is the first year of the Chinese Lunar calendar, and is associated with "happiness" and "good fortune" and "protection" in the Chinese culture. "The Year of the Ox is a significant animal for the Chinese," said the President of B.R. Market, a Chinese multinational food and beverage company. "It is a lucky animal and if you find a good-luck pendant made of the Year of the Ox, you'll get good luck and fortune. In the Chinese Spring Festival, this animal is eaten during the night, and the animals of other zodiacs (rooster, pig, sheep, tiger, rabbit and dragon) are eaten in the daytime. In the future, the Day of the Ox will be the first day of the Chinese Lunar New Year. Since it is the first animal of the Chinese Lunar New Year, it is also associated with the Chinese New Year. During the Chinese New Year, Ox stallions are blessed and girls wearing red clothes can also expect some good luck in the coming year. As a computer wallpaper, the year of the ox is a colorful and lively animal. It's a good 77a5ca646e

Snow Leopards Description: Snow leopards are the most mysterious and elusive of the large cats. Less than 300 of these cats are believed to remain in the world, and it is often difficult to identify them in the field. Many scientists believe that as few as 15 to 30 survive. Snow leopards are big, cats with a long tail, and sleek black fur. They grow up to be about two and a half feet long and weigh about 100 pounds. The snow leopard has short whiskers and a pointed nose. It has black fur except for a lighter colored nose. Its coat is somewhat paler on the belly and under its legs. The spots on the sides of the snow leopards usually stay in the same shape but some animals will have spots that flash brightly before they turn to white. Snow leopards are found in the snow-covered mountains of China, Mongolia, Central Asia and the Himalayas. They are one of the most rare animals, and there are an estimated 300 or less in the wild. They eat rabbits, rodents, deer, and other small mammals. Their diet is mainly vegetarian but they will also eat snakes and birds. Snow leopards do not usually hunt at night but they are crepuscular, meaning they will hunt around dawn and dusk. Females usually have four or five cubs that are born in the spring. This is when they first eat meat. When cubs are about two or three months old, they will begin to eat meat, especially rodents and small deer. By the time they are one year old, they are fully-grown and mature. A snow leopard will make about five different scrapes and marks in the snow. This is where a snow leopard marks its territory. Its scat is light brown and usually has stringy hair and a sweet smell. Snow leopards also can scratch up snow to create hiding spots. They leave their own marks for the same reason. But that is not the only reason that they make these marks. The number of marks a snow leopard leaves in its territory is thought to be a
